INTRODUCTION

More than 500 participants from 25 African countries attended the African Business Leaders Forum 2005 held in Johannesburg. The two-day event gathered high-level decision-makers from both public and private sectors. Four live TV broadcast debates took place during the Forum, covering issues of poverty, entrepreneurship, women in leadership and governance.

2006 FOCUS

As we move into the century that many have called the century of Africa, we need leaders who can bring us from the back of the race to the front. We need a leadership that will develop new value systems and new ways of looking at ourselves and the world of work and the socio-economic milieu.

Building on the success achieved in the past three years, the Fourth Annual African Business Leaders Forum will once again engage leaders from both public and private sectors in critical issues faced by the continent. These include service delivery and infrastructure development, skills development and mentorship, women empowerment, economic growth and sustainability, good governance and poverty alleviation.

The forum is targeted at chief executives, managing directors, chairmen, director generals, government advisors, legislators, political and civil society leaders, entrepreneurs, legal advisors, senior and middle-level decision-makers in public/private organisations in Africa.

WHAT IS THE AFRICAN BUSINESS LEADERS FORUM

The purpose of the African Business Leaders Forum is to concentrate minds on finding solutions to challenging issues of leadership at various levels in Africa.

Through the NEPAD initiative, African governments are increasingly engaged in seeking communal improvement, expansion of infrastructure and continued social, political and economic development. The leadership challenges in executing these tasks are enormous. The African Leadership Forum provides an interface for stakeholders in the public and private sectors to make viable contributions to addressing these challenges.

THE NEED FOR THE AFRICAN BUSINESS LEADERS FORUM

In a rapidly changing African economic and political environment the quest for the ideal African leadership model continues. The African Business Leaders Forum addresses the need to engage African leaders at all levels with a view to identifying and implementing sustainable solutions to the continent's developmental challenges.

WHY EXHIBIT?

For companies seeking market penetration into Africa, this forum provides an invaluable opportunity and one not to be missed.

The delegate target market focuses on top-end decision makers. Exhibiting at the ABLF 2006 will gain your product exceptional exposure to a select target market.
